

MISCELLANEOUS ADVERTISEMENTS.

F. C. COOK & CO.

Are offering bargains in Ladies' and Gents' Jewelry, Watches, Diamonds, Silverware, Etc.

Gold and Silver Watches, Jewelry, Diamonds, Silverware, Etc.

They have the largest and best selected stock in the city.

P. S. FINE WATCH REPAIRING A SPECIALTY.

COAL, COAL!

No. 4 COAL IS THE BEST

Quality and best size in the market. To be convinced, just leave your order with GATELEY!

I also offer special prices on

GREEN AND DRY WOOD!

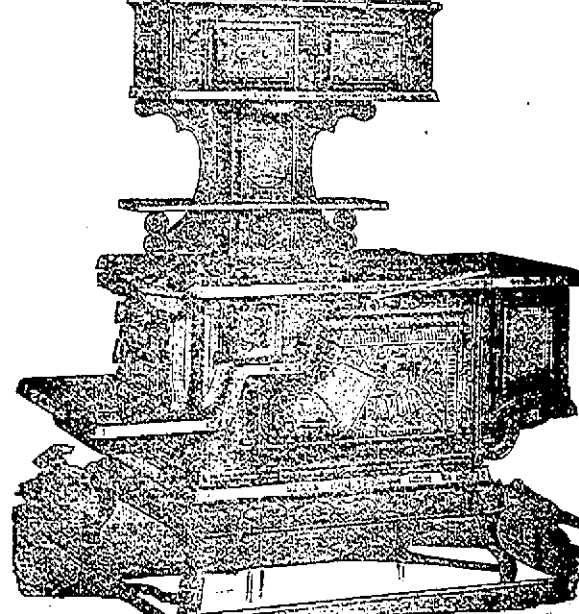

The best Green Second Growth Oak in five cord lots or more, piled and measured in yard, for $4.50 per cord, or sawed two times for $5.25 per cord. Also special prices made on Green maple in 5 or 10 cord lots. Do not forget the place, "The Model Coal Yard" North Bluff St., or leave orders with R. W. King or I. C. Brownell.

Farmers Wanting Green Wood Call at the yard for special Prices.

Thanking the public for their liberal patronage in the past and hoping they will continue to favor me in the future with the same, I remain,

Yours respectfully,

J. H. GATELEY.

FAVORITE RANGE.

A personal examination with the recommends we have will convince any one that this beautiful Range has no equal.

HANCHETT & SHELDON.

Wholesale and retail dealers in Hardware, etc., Main St. Janesville Wis.

HARD TIMES MADE EASY

A LIBERAL DISCOUNT MADE ON ALL GOODS IN STOCK FOR THE NEXT THIRTY DAYS—CASH.

J. L. FORD.

2019 West Milwaukee St. Janesville, Wis.

20 YEARS' DEVOTED TO THE TREATMENT OF CHRONIC DISEASES

This long experience with thousands of patients enables me to cure every curable case. Those afflicted with Lung or Throat Disease, Heart, Liver or Kidney Disease, Nervous Prostration, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Gout, Gravel, Yaws, Indigestion, and all other Chronic Diseases, Old Sores, Tumors, or any Chronic Affliction, are invited to call and examine my record of cases cured with hope of a cure had been abandoned.

Candid in my examinations, reasonable in my charges, and never an ounce of medicine without a surety of success.

DR. F. B. BREWER

Residence: Laboratory, EVANSTON, ILL.

At Janesville, Wis., Myers house, on Saturday, the 9th day of April. Address all letters to Drs. Brewer & Son, Evanston, Ill.

THE GAZETTE.

SATURDAY MARCH 12.

ESTABLISHED BY THE GAZETTE PRINTING COMPANY OF JANESVILLE, WIS. PUBLISHED WEEKLY FOR THE PROPRIETOR, GEORGE H. SMITH, BY J. P. BLISS, PRESIDENT, AND J. H. BLADON, SECRETARY.

TERMS: $1.00 PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE.

ADVERTISING: $5.00 PER LINE PER WEEK.

HIS NEIGHBORS' REGARD.

PUBLIC SERVICES OVER THE REMAINS OF THE DEAD BEECHER.

Give Fitting Expression to the Love and Reverence of His Fellow Townsmen—Honorable Discourses by Revs. Hall and Talmage—The Struggle for a Daring Look—A Day of Mourning.

New York, March 12.—All Brooklyn was in mourning Friday over the death of Henry Ward Beecher. The public offices were closed, business was entirely suspended, and memorial services were held in a large number of churches in the vicinity of Plymouth church. The up-town streets looked deserted. As early as 7 o'clock Fulton avenue was thronged with people hurrying in the direction of Plymouth church. Lines of policemen were stationed at the ends of the block on which the church is situated, and no one was allowed to pass through the line unless he had a ticket. Five o'clock the line in Orange street was two blocks long, three abreast. The streets were packed with people, who hung around hoping that they might be able to get in without a ticket. The members of Plymouth church, of the Thirtieth regiment, of which Mr. Beecher was chaplain, were stationed at the doors of the church and in the lecture-room.

While the vast crowd of people were gathering outside of the church the lady members of the congregation were working like beavers within, dressing the pulpit and casiot with flowers. The whole interior was turned into a perfect flower-garden, and the fragrant perfume of the roses prevailed the air. The walls, galleries, and organ were covered with evergreens, palms, and calla lilies. The reading-desk was covered with roses and vines as was also the altar in which Mr. Beecher sat. For many years the center of the organ-vault was a floral emblem in the shape of a triangle, on the top of which were perched two white doves with white ribbons in their bills. The facade of the gallery was covered with potted plants, and the pulpit was loaded down with flowers and floral emblems sent by friends and different organizations. The casiot was placed on a catanque of white roses, white carnations, and smilax, draping in front of the reading-desk. Mrs. S. V. White and several ladies devoted their time before the doors were opened in covering the casiot with lilies of the valley, carnations, roses, smilax, maidenhair ferns, Primulas, and French marigolds. When they finished not a vestige of the black covering of the casiot could be seen. There was nothing to indicate the presence of death except the stillness which pervaded the room and the hushed conversation of the workers. The church had more the appearance of a wedding than a funeral.

It was nearly 10 o'clock before the doors were thrown open to those who had been waiting without for nearly three hours. During the time that the ladies were being shown to their seats the organist played low, sweet music upon the grand organ. The first four seats on the right of the center aisle were reserved for the relatives of the deceased. Mr. Beecher's mother, French, and his wife, Mrs. S. V. White, were seated in the front, and the family was with them. Mr. Beecher was in the church for a few minutes before the doors were opened and left with his sons before the crowd entered.

On the left side of the center aisle were the members of the Clerical union, of which Mr. Beecher was a member a number of years. Behind these were seated the officers of the Thirtieth regiment, and then came the members of the legislative committee who wore badges made of white silk. Behind those were delegates from nearly every social, political, or religious organization in New York and Brooklyn. There was a delegation of the colored ministers' association present.

At 10:30 o'clock the Rev. Charles F. Hall, robed in his white surplice and accompanied by the Rev. S. B. Halliday, entered the church and ascended the platform. When music ceased Dr. Hall commenced to read in low but clear tones the opening sentences of the Protestant Episcopal burial service. After these the double quartet and chorus of sixty voices sang the burial chant, "Lord, Let Me Know Mine End." The lesson was read by Dr. Hall and a prayer was delivered by the Rev. S. B. Halliday. The rest of the musical programme was as follows: Anthem, "Benedictus," by the choir; "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "I Heard a Voice," "Hark, Hark, My Soul." The organ was presided over by Henry B. Brown and Con. Horatio C. King.

After the first lesson Dr. Hall delivered his oration. During its delivery there was not a dry eye in the house, and several times he was compelled to stop for a time to gain control of his voice. The oration was an elegant eulogy of the deceased, and was closed with an incident which took place in Plymouth church two weeks ago, when Mr. Beecher remained after the congregation had dispersed to listen to the organist who was playing a hymn of two singers, who were practicing a hymn. While the organist was playing the hymn, two little street boys wandered into the office attracted by the music, and one of them stood as though entranced, listening. Mr. Beecher stooped down, raised the boy's face and kissed him, and then with his arms about both of them left the church for the last time. The close of the oration was as follows:

It was a fitting close to a grand life—the old man of genius and fame shielding the little wanderers great in language, tradition, ways and prejudices, great also in the gesture, so like him, that recognized as did the minister that the loudest his brother's voice of cheer—then the great preacher led out into the night by the little nameless wail.

The "Life of Christ" is a life unfinished for us to do his little part, and we were to humble ourselves and teachings into the story. Men will praise our brother for genius, patriotism, victories, and intellect. My love for him has had its origin in his broad humanity, his utter lack of sham, his transparent love for his nation from above that dwells in and reaches and battles the flames of duty. He said of his father: "The two things which he desired most were the glory of God and the good of men." He was with him, as the hearts of grateful myriads attest. But we bid him fare farewell; and to me, at least, will come the vision of him passing out of your door with him about the boys; passing on to the city of God, where he hears again the familiar voice of the master saying, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Dr. Hall pronounced the benediction and the vast audience slowly filed out of the church. It was a notable gathering and one long to be remembered by those present.

After the conclusion of the services at the church the public was admitted to view the body. The people were formed in line along Orange street, and many streets with policemen every few yards to keep the late-comers from breaking in. In a short time the line extended for two blocks, and two hours after the doors were thrown open the line was nearly a quarter of a mile long, three times the length of that of the previous day.

Those in charge of the funeral had intended to close the doors of the church at 3 p. m., but when the appointed hour arrived, the crowd was so dense that it was decided to give an hour of grace. The line commencing at the casiot inside the church extended down Orange street to Henry, down Henry to Fulton avenue, and thence around the corner, where it terminated in an irregular group, which was beyond the pale of police supervision. The procession of the people to cut favorable positions in the line, led to a number of incidents with the police. Strange as it may seem the line was the most trouble with the police. More than one lady would plead with the police to be allowed to enter the line near the church in order to save the long wait necessitated by going down to Fulton avenue. The younger ladies especially proved themselves superior to the curiosity which was upon penetrating the lines and calmly ignoring the dismayed policemen, who were too callous to arrest the fair interlopers, and would powerless to keep them out by orders and protestations. The scenes of Thursday were steadily reproduced throughout the day. There were the same dense throngs, the same determination on all sides to catch a view of the body, and the same solemn good order. The line moved steadily into the church, dividing at the casiot, until a few minutes after 4, when the doors were shut until the children of the Sunday school could be gotten in order.

When the little ones had formed by columns of two they were marched in and past the body and by their bright clothing and quiet awe gave another phase to the scene of solemnity in the dusky interior. The children seemed each to have a personal attachment for the dead pastor, and more than one young pair of eyes was loaded in tears at the first glimpse of the peaceful face in the coffin. After the children—numbering 2,000 or more—had passed, there was another influx of people which continued for several hours.

It is estimated that fully 25,000 people attended services in the various churches, and that fully twice that number were gathered in the street in the neighborhood of Plymouth church.

At the First Baptist church, Rev. T. De Witt Talmage made the principal address. He said:

It is a beautiful thing in human nature the disposition to speak well of the dead. It is a beautiful thing in human nature that we desire to postpone until after their decease the praises that were due the living. For mortals edulge us often with the hope to make statements for posterity that will not be true. There will be two ears to that that will not hear one word of the appreciation, and there will be two eyes that will not read one word of complimentary journalism—the eyes, the ears of the mighty man, for whose obsequies we are convened.

We commit his immortal spirit to the bosom of a living God. But how much we shall miss our friend! Great charities will be great charities upon our platform, but his voice will not be heard to plead for them. The times of national crisis will come, but he will not be here to champion the right. The great conflict through the forces of God and the forces of sin seems gathering for an Armageddon, but his battle axe will not gleam in the field.

Continuing Dr. Talmage paid a glowing tribute to the dead pastor, and concluded as follows:

And now, farewell, illustrious brother. Carry him gently out along the streets with which he has so long been familiar. For the first time to pass without smile or cheer, recognition. Take him out to the silent city where sleep so many to whom he once ministered. They will not greet him now, but on resurrection morn they will rise and greet him as they greet the living. Put him to rest under the early crosses of the spring, for he must lie very tired. His right hand closed for him, for more perfect words for him to write. His lips shut, for there are no more encouraging words for him to speak. His brow cool, for his hand has stopped under it. His brow cool, for it will never breathe again. I put upon his grave not a single wreath, not a single blossom, but I put upon his grave a scroll, plain and white, a scroll that open that you may read it from both sides. "I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live. 'On Christ the solid rock I stand.' All other foundations are shifting sand."

THE GAZETTE.

SATURDAY MARCH 12.

ESTABLISHED BY THE GAZETTE PRINTING COMPANY OF JANESVILLE, WIS. PUBLISHED WEEKLY FOR THE PROPRIETOR, GEORGE H. SMITH, BY J. P. BLISS, PRESIDENT, AND J. H. BLADON, SECRETARY.

TERMS: $1.00 PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE.

ADVERTISING: $5.00 PER LINE PER WEEK.

HIS NEIGHBORS' REGARD.

PUBLIC SERVICES OVER THE REMAINS OF THE DEAD BEECHER.

Give Fitting Expression to the Love and Reverence of His Fellow Townsmen—Honorable Discourses by Revs. Hall and Talmage—The Struggle for a Daring Look—A Day of Mourning.

New York, March 12.—All Brooklyn was in mourning Friday over the death of Henry Ward Beecher. The public offices were closed, business was entirely suspended, and memorial services were held in a large number of churches in the vicinity of Plymouth church. The up-town streets looked deserted. As early as 7 o'clock Fulton avenue was thronged with people hurrying in the direction of Plymouth church. Lines of policemen were stationed at the ends of the block on which the church is situated, and no one was allowed to pass through the line unless he had a ticket. Five o'clock the line in Orange street was two blocks long, three abreast. The streets were packed with people, who hung around hoping that they might be able to get in without a ticket. The members of Plymouth church, of the Thirtieth regiment, of which Mr. Beecher was chaplain, were stationed at the doors of the church and in the lecture-room.

While the vast crowd of people were gathering outside of the church the lady members of the congregation were working like beavers within, dressing the pulpit and casiot with flowers. The whole interior was turned into a perfect flower-garden, and the fragrant perfume of the roses prevailed the air. The walls, galleries, and organ were covered with evergreens, palms, and calla lilies. The reading-desk was covered with roses and vines as was also the altar in which Mr. Beecher sat. For many years the center of the organ-vault was a floral emblem in the shape of a triangle, on the top of which were perched two white doves with white ribbons in their bills. The facade of the gallery was covered with potted plants, and the pulpit was loaded down with flowers and floral emblems sent by friends and different organizations. The casiot was placed on a catanque of white roses, white carnations, and smilax, draping in front of the reading-desk. Mrs. S. V. White and several ladies devoted their time before the doors were opened in covering the casiot with lilies of the valley, carnations, roses, smilax, maidenhair ferns, Primulas, and French marigolds. When they finished not a vestige of the black covering of the casiot could be seen. There was nothing to indicate the presence of death except the stillness which pervaded the room and the hushed conversation of the workers. The church had more the appearance of a wedding than a funeral.

It was nearly 10 o'clock before the doors were thrown open to those who had been waiting without for nearly three hours. During the time that the ladies were being shown to their seats the organist played low, sweet music upon the grand organ. The first four seats on the right of the center aisle were reserved for the relatives of the deceased. Mr. Beecher's mother, French, and his wife, Mrs. S. V. White, were seated in the front, and the family was with them. Mr. Beecher was in the church for a few minutes before the doors were opened and left with his sons before the crowd entered.

On the left side of the center aisle were the members of the Clerical union, of which Mr. Beecher was a member a number of years. Behind these were seated the officers of the Thirtieth regiment, and then came the members of the legislative committee who wore badges made of white silk. Behind those were delegates from nearly every social, political, or religious organization in New York and Brooklyn. There was a delegation of the colored ministers' association present.

At 10:30 o'clock the Rev. Charles F. Hall, robed in his white surplice and accompanied by the Rev. S. B. Halliday, entered the church and ascended the platform. When music ceased Dr. Hall commenced to read in low but clear tones the opening sentences of the Protestant Episcopal burial service. After these the double quartet and chorus of sixty voices sang the burial chant, "Lord, Let Me Know Mine End." The lesson was read by Dr. Hall and a prayer was delivered by the Rev. S. B. Halliday. The rest of the musical programme was as follows: Anthem, "Benedictus," by the choir; "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "I Heard a Voice," "Hark, Hark, My Soul." The organ was presided over by Henry B. Brown and Con. Horatio C. King.

After the first lesson Dr. Hall delivered his oration. During its delivery there was not a dry eye in the house, and several times he was compelled to stop for a time to gain control of his voice. The oration was an elegant eulogy of the deceased, and was closed with an incident which took place in Plymouth church two weeks ago, when Mr. Beecher remained after the congregation had dispersed to listen to the organist who was playing a hymn. While the organist was playing the hymn, two little street boys wandered into the office attracted by the music, and one of them stood as though entranced, listening. Mr. Beecher stooped down, raised the boy's face and kissed him, and then with his arms about both of them left the church for the last time. The close of the oration was as follows:

It was a fitting close to a grand life—the old man of genius and fame shielding the little wanderers great in language, tradition, ways and prejudices, great also in the gesture, so like him, that recognized as did the minister that the loudest his brother's voice of cheer—then the great preacher led out into the night by the little nameless wail.

The "Life of Christ" is a life unfinished for us to do his little part, and we were to humble ourselves and teachings into the story. Men will praise our brother for genius, patriotism, victories, and intellect. My love for him has had its origin in his broad humanity, his utter lack of sham, his transparent love for his nation from above that dwells in and reaches and battles the flames of duty. He said of his father: "The two things which he desired most were the glory of God and the good of men." He was with him, as the hearts of grateful myriads attest. But we bid him fare farewell; and to me, at least, will come the vision of him passing out of your door with him about the boys; passing on to the city of God, where he hears again the familiar voice of the master saying, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Dr. Hall pronounced the benediction and the vast audience slowly filed out of the church. It was a notable gathering and one long to be remembered by those present.

After the conclusion of the services at the church the public was admitted to view the body. The people were formed in line along Orange street, and many streets with policemen every few yards to keep the late-comers from breaking in. In a short time the line extended for two blocks, and two hours after the doors were thrown open the line was nearly a quarter of a mile long, three times the length of that of the previous day.

Those in charge of the funeral had intended to close the doors of the church at 3 p. m., but when the appointed hour arrived, the crowd was so dense that it was decided to give an hour of grace. The line commencing at the casiot inside the church extended down Orange street to Henry, down Henry to Fulton avenue, and thence around the corner, where it terminated in an irregular group, which was beyond the pale of police supervision. The procession of the people to cut favorable positions in the line, led to a number of incidents with the police. Strange as it may seem the line was the most trouble with the police. More than one lady would plead with the police to be allowed to enter the line near the church in order to save the long wait necessitated by going down to Fulton avenue. The younger ladies especially proved themselves superior to the curiosity which was upon penetrating the lines and calmly ignoring the dismayed policemen, who were too callous to arrest the fair interlopers, and would powerless to keep them out by orders and protestations. The scenes of Thursday were steadily reproduced throughout the day. There were the same dense throngs, the same determination on all sides to catch a view of the body, and the same solemn good order. The line moved steadily into the church, dividing at the casiot, until a few minutes after 4, when the doors were shut until the children of the Sunday school could be gotten in order.

When the little ones had formed by columns of two they were marched in and past the body and by their bright clothing and quiet awe gave another phase to the scene of solemnity in the dusky interior. The children seemed each to have a personal attachment for the dead pastor, and more than one young pair of eyes was loaded in tears at the first glimpse of the peaceful face in the coffin. After the children—numbering 2,000 or more—had passed, there was another influx of people which continued for several hours.

It is estimated that fully 25,000 people attended services in the various churches, and that fully twice that number were gathered in the street in the neighborhood of Plymouth church.

At the First Baptist church, Rev. T. De Witt Talmage made the principal address. He said:

It is a beautiful thing in human nature the disposition to speak well of the dead. It is a beautiful thing in human nature that we desire to postpone until after their decease the praises that were due the living. For mortals edulge us often with the hope to make statements for posterity that will not be true. There will be two ears to that that will not hear one word of the appreciation, and there will be two eyes that will not read one word of complimentary journalism—the eyes, the ears of the mighty man, for whose obsequies we are convened.

We commit his immortal spirit to the bosom of a living God. But how much we shall miss our friend! Great charities will be great charities upon our platform, but his voice will not be heard to plead for them. The times of national crisis will come, but he will not be here to champion the right. The great conflict through the forces of God and the forces of sin seems gathering for an Armageddon, but his battle axe will not gleam in the field.

Continuing Dr. Talmage paid a glowing tribute to the dead pastor, and concluded as follows:

And now, farewell, illustrious brother. Carry him gently out along the streets with which he has so long been familiar. For the first time to pass without smile or cheer, recognition. Take him out to the silent city where sleep so many to whom he once ministered. They will not greet him now, but on resurrection morn they will rise and greet him as they greet the living. Put him to rest under the early crosses of the spring, for he must lie very tired. His right hand closed for him, for more perfect words for him to write. His lips shut, for there are no more encouraging words for him to speak. His brow cool, for his hand has stopped under it. His brow cool, for it will never breathe again. I put upon his grave not a single wreath, not a single blossom, but I put upon his grave a scroll, plain and white, a scroll that open that you may read it from both sides. "I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live. 'On Christ the solid rock I stand.' All other foundations are shifting sand."

A WOMAN SET RIGHT.

Mrs. McClellan Fully Vindicated of the Charges Against Her.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 12.—Mrs. McClellan and her daughter, Flora, who were arrested Wednesday night on the charge of having caused the death of Anna Nickle, aged 13 years, were discharged from custody Friday, the coroner's jury having rendered a verdict of suicide. The evidence showed beyond the possibility of a doubt that Anna had died by her own hands. Ample evidence was also produced to establish an alibi for Mrs. McClellan and her daughter. They both retained their composure up to the time of the announcement of the verdict, but as they were discharged they broke into tears and were led from the room in tears.

JOHN C. NEW STRICKEN.

His Friends Alarmed Over a Stroke of Paralysis.

Detroit, March 12.—A Washington special to The Journal says: "The friends of John C. New, formerly assistant secretary of the treasury, and now proprietor of The Indianapolis Journal, are seriously alarmed over a paralytic stroke which he suffered Friday night at the Ritz house. He is now in a hospital before the United States supreme court."

Not Easy to "Corner" Wheat.

New York, March 12.—R. C. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: Wheat seemed to be "cornered" at Chicago early in the week; an immense combination, which was said to hold over 50,000,000 bushels, seemed to be holding out on Thursday. Wheat markets were employed, as usual, but with little effect. Exports for the previous week had been equal to 3,327,000 bushels of wheat from chief Atlantic ports, but purchases for export—a very different matter—have been small since prices advanced. With more than 90,000,000 bushels in the country in excess of all home needs for the crop year, the chances of a successful corner are not flattering.

Have Sent for Arms.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 12.—The contractors who are constructing the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railroad have sent here and to St. Ignace for arms. The men on the east and south of middle divisions have armed for an advance on $1.00 per day. The total number of arms is about 500. The superintendent of construction and chief engineer Thursday night stated that the strike is very embarrassing. They have contracted to turn over the road complete by July 1. The leaders of the strike were immediately discharged, but refused to leave the scene, and feeling runs high.

Wisconsin Grand Lodge K. of P.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 12.—The grand lodge of Wisconsin, Knights of Pythias, has concluded its business and adjourned. The following are the new officers: Grand chancellor, B. W. Hunt; Milwaukee vice-chancellor, S. D. Hubbard; Montclair master of exchequer, Fred Kraus; Milwaukee; keeper of records and seals, H. J. Wood; Oshkosh; inner guard, Philip Valter; Milwaukee; outer guard, A. W. Goss; Janesville; secretary, George B. Shaw; Eau Claire.

Attain by the Train.

CHICAGO, March 12.—George Halsey, son of the late Dr. Clinton Halsey, of South Evanston, was struck by the Chicago & Evanston train Friday night and instantly killed. His little sister Ida was injured at the same time, but will recover. The young man was tragically mangled.

Law Against Larceny.

LANSING, Mich., March 12.—The Grand jury has become a law. It has indicted the keeper of a house of ill-fame, or procurer, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for both from one to five years.

Refused Smith a Hearing.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 12.—The supreme court Friday overruled the petition of State Senator Smith for a rehearing in the Smith-Robertson litigation.

Two Western Settlers' Chosen Specific.

With every advance of emigration into the far west, a new demand is created for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Newly settled regions are frequently less healthy, because their older settled localities, on account of the miasmata which rises from recently cleared land, particularly along the banks of rivers that are subject to freshets. The agricultural or mining emigrant soon learns, when he does not already know, that the bitters afford the only sure protection against malaria, and those disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, to which climate changes, exposure, and unaccustomed or unhealthy water or diet give rise. Consequently he places an estimate on this great household specific and preventative, commensurate with its intrinsic merits, and is careful to keep on hand a restorative and promoter of health so implicitly to be relied upon in time of need.

Dr. Smith's Sugar Coated Bile Beans.

Dr. Smith's Sugar Coated Bile Beans, Pills, unequalled for constiveness, jaundice and liver troubles. 25c.

—TWENTY CENTS A WEEK PAYS FOR THE DAILY GAZETTE—SENT IN 70¢ NAMES

THE GAZETTE.

SATURDAY MARCH 12.

ESTABLISHED BY THE GAZETTE PRINTING COMPANY OF JANESVILLE, WIS. PUBLISHED WEEKLY FOR THE PROPRIETOR, GEORGE H. SMITH, BY J. P. BLISS, PRESIDENT, AND J. H. BLADON, SECRETARY.

TERMS: $1.00 PER ANNUM IN ADVANCE.

ADVERTISING: $5.00 PER LINE PER WEEK.

HIS NEIGHBORS' REGARD.

PUBLIC SERVICES OVER THE REMAINS OF THE DEAD BEECHER.

Give Fitting Expression to the Love and Reverence of His Fellow Townsmen—Honorable Discourses by Revs. Hall and Talmage—The Struggle for a Daring Look—A Day of Mourning.

New York, March 12.—All Brooklyn was in mourning Friday over the death of Henry Ward Beecher. The public offices were closed, business was entirely suspended, and memorial services were held in a large number of churches in the vicinity of Plymouth church. The up-town streets looked deserted. As early as 7 o'clock Fulton avenue was thronged with people hurrying in the direction of Plymouth church. Lines of policemen were stationed at the ends of the block on which the church is situated, and no one was allowed to pass through the line unless he had a ticket. Five o'clock the line in Orange street was two blocks long, three abreast. The streets were packed with people, who hung around hoping that they might be able to get in without a ticket. The members of Plymouth church, of the Thirtieth regiment, of which Mr. Beecher was chaplain, were stationed at the doors of the church and in the lecture-room.

While the vast crowd of people were gathering outside of the church the lady members of the congregation were working like beavers within, dressing the pulpit and casiot with flowers. The whole interior was turned into a perfect flower-garden, and the fragrant perfume of the roses prevailed the air. The walls, galleries, and organ were covered with evergreens, palms, and calla lilies. The reading-desk was covered with roses and vines as was also the altar in which Mr. Beecher sat. For many years the center of the organ-vault was a floral emblem in the shape of a triangle, on the top of which were perched two white doves with white ribbons in their bills. The facade of the gallery was covered with potted plants, and the pulpit was loaded down with flowers and floral emblems sent by friends and different organizations. The casiot was placed on a catanque of white roses, white carnations, and smilax, draping in front of the reading-desk. Mrs. S. V. White and several ladies devoted their time before the doors were opened in covering the casiot with lilies of the valley, carnations, roses, smilax, maidenhair ferns, Primulas, and French marigolds. When they finished not a vestige of the black covering of the casiot could be seen. There was nothing to indicate the presence of death except the stillness which pervaded the room and the hushed conversation of the workers. The church had more the appearance of a wedding than a funeral.

It was nearly 10 o'clock before the doors were thrown open to those who had been waiting without for nearly three hours. During the time that the ladies were being shown to their seats the organist played low, sweet music upon the grand organ. The first four seats on the right of the center aisle were reserved for the relatives of the deceased. Mr. Beecher's mother, French, and his wife, Mrs. S. V. White, were seated in the front, and the family was with them. Mr. Beecher was in the church for a few minutes before the doors were opened and left with his sons before the crowd entered.

On the left side of the center aisle were the members of the Clerical union, of which Mr. Beecher was a member a number of years. Behind these were seated the officers of the Thirtieth regiment, and then came the members of the legislative committee who wore badges made of white silk. Behind those were delegates from nearly every social, political, or religious organization in New York and Brooklyn. There was a delegation of the colored ministers' association present.

At 10:30 o'clock the Rev. Charles F. Hall, robed in his white surplice and accompanied by the Rev. S. B. Halliday, entered the church and ascended the platform. When music ceased Dr. Hall commenced to read in low but clear tones the opening sentences of the Protestant Episcopal burial service. After these the double quartet and chorus of sixty voices sang the burial chant, "Lord, Let Me Know Mine End." The lesson was read by Dr. Hall and a prayer was delivered by the Rev. S. B. Halliday. The rest of the musical programme was as follows: Anthem, "Benedictus," by the choir; "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," "I Heard a Voice," "Hark, Hark, My Soul." The organ was presided over by Henry B. Brown and Con. Horatio C. King.

After the first lesson Dr. Hall delivered his oration. During its delivery there was not a dry eye in the house, and several times he was compelled to stop for a time to gain control of his voice. The oration was an elegant eulogy of the deceased, and was closed with an incident which took place in Plymouth church two weeks ago, when Mr. Beecher remained after the congregation had dispersed to listen to the organist who was playing a hymn. While the organist was playing the hymn, two little street boys wandered into the office attracted by the music, and one of them stood as though entranced, listening. Mr. Beecher stooped down, raised the boy's face and kissed him, and then with his arms about both of them left the church for the last time. The close of the oration was as follows:

It was a fitting close to a grand life—the old man of genius and fame shielding the little wanderers great in language, tradition, ways and prejudices, great also in the gesture, so like him, that recognized as did the minister that the loudest his brother's voice of cheer—then the great preacher led out into the night by the little nameless wail.

The "Life of Christ" is a life unfinished for us to do his little part, and we were to humble ourselves and teachings into the story. Men will praise our brother for genius, patriotism, victories, and intellect. My love for him has had its origin in his broad humanity, his utter lack of sham, his transparent love for his nation from above that dwells in and reaches and battles the flames of duty. He said of his father: "The two things which he desired most were the glory of God and the good of men." He was with him, as the hearts of grateful myriads attest. But we bid him fare farewell; and to me, at least, will come the vision of him passing out of your door with him about the boys; passing on to the city of God, where he hears again the familiar voice of the master saying, "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Dr. Hall pronounced the benediction and the vast audience slowly filed out of the church. It was a notable gathering and one long to be remembered by those present.

After the conclusion of the services at the church the public was admitted to view the body. The people were formed in line along Orange street, and many streets with policemen every few yards to keep the late-comers from breaking in. In a short time the line extended for two blocks, and two hours after the doors were thrown open the line was nearly a quarter of a mile long, three times the length of that of the previous day.

Those in charge of the funeral had intended to close the doors of the church at 3 p. m., but when the appointed hour arrived, the crowd was so dense that it was decided to give an hour of grace. The line commencing at the casiot inside the church extended down Orange street to Henry, down Henry to Fulton avenue, and thence around the corner, where it terminated in an irregular group, which was beyond the pale of police supervision. The procession of the people to cut favorable positions in the line, led to a number of incidents with the police. Strange as it may seem the line was the most trouble with the police. More than one lady would plead with the police to be allowed to enter the line near the church in order to save the long wait necessitated by going down to Fulton avenue. The younger ladies especially proved themselves superior to the curiosity which was upon penetrating the lines and calmly ignoring the dismayed policemen, who were too callous to arrest the fair interlopers, and would powerless to keep them out by orders and protestations. The scenes of Thursday were steadily reproduced throughout the day. There were the same dense throngs, the same determination on all sides to catch a view of the body, and the same solemn good order. The line moved steadily into the church, dividing at the casiot, until a few minutes after 4, when the doors were shut until the children of the Sunday school could be gotten in order.

When the little ones had formed by columns of two they were marched in and past the body and by their bright clothing and quiet awe gave another phase to the scene of solemnity in the dusky interior. The children seemed each to have a personal attachment for the dead pastor, and more than one young pair of eyes was loaded in tears at the first glimpse of the peaceful face in the coffin. After the children—numbering 2,000 or more—had passed, there was another influx of people which continued for several hours.

It is estimated that fully 25,000 people attended services in the various churches, and that fully twice that number were gathered in the street in the neighborhood of Plymouth church.

At the First Baptist church, Rev. T. De Witt Talmage made the principal address. He said:

It is a beautiful thing in human nature the disposition to speak well of the dead. It is a beautiful thing in human nature that we desire to postpone until after their decease the praises that were due the living. For mortals edulge us often with the hope to make statements for posterity that will not be true. There will be two ears to that that will not hear one word of the appreciation, and there will be two eyes that will not read one word of complimentary journalism—the eyes, the ears of the mighty man, for whose obsequies we are convened.

We commit his immortal spirit to the bosom of a living God. But how much we shall miss our friend! Great charities will be great charities upon our platform, but his voice will not be heard to plead for them. The times of national crisis will come, but he will not be here to champion the right. The great conflict through the forces of God and the forces of sin seems gathering for an Armageddon, but his battle axe will not gleam in the field.

Continuing Dr. Talmage paid a glowing tribute to the dead pastor, and concluded as follows:

And now, farewell, illustrious brother. Carry him gently out along the streets with which he has so long been familiar. For the first time to pass without smile or cheer, recognition. Take him out to the silent city where sleep so many to whom he once ministered. They will not greet him now, but on resurrection morn they will rise and greet him as they greet the living. Put him to rest under the early crosses of the spring, for he must lie very tired. His right hand closed for him, for more perfect words for him to write. His lips shut, for there are no more encouraging words for him to speak. His brow cool, for his hand has stopped under it. His brow cool, for it will never breathe again. I put upon his grave not a single wreath, not a single blossom, but I put upon his grave a scroll, plain and white, a scroll that open that you may read it from both sides. "I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live. 'On Christ the solid rock I stand.' All other foundations are shifting sand."

A WOMAN SET RIGHT.

Mrs. McClellan Fully Vindicated of the Charges Against Her.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., March 12.—Mrs. McClellan and her daughter, Flora, who were arrested Wednesday night on the charge of having caused the death of Anna Nickle, aged 13 years, were discharged from custody Friday, the coroner's jury having rendered a verdict of suicide. The evidence showed beyond the possibility of a doubt that Anna had died by her own hands. Ample evidence was also produced to establish an alibi for Mrs. McClellan and her daughter. They both retained their composure up to the time of the announcement of the verdict, but as they were discharged they broke into tears and were led from the room in tears.

JOHN C. NEW STRICKEN.

His Friends Alarmed Over a Stroke of Paralysis.

Detroit, March 12.—A Washington special to The Journal says: "The friends of John C. New, formerly assistant secretary of the treasury, and now proprietor of The Indianapolis Journal, are seriously alarmed over a paralytic stroke which he suffered Friday night at the Ritz house. He is now in a hospital before the United States supreme court."

Not Easy to "Corner" Wheat.

New York, March 12.—R. C. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says: Wheat seemed to be "cornered" at Chicago early in the week; an immense combination, which was said to hold over 50,000,000 bushels, seemed to be holding out on Thursday. Wheat markets were employed, as usual, but with little effect. Exports for the previous week had been equal to 3,327,000 bushels of wheat from chief Atlantic ports, but purchases for export—a very different matter—have been small since prices advanced. With more than 90,000,000 bushels in the country in excess of all home needs for the crop year, the chances of a successful corner are not flattering.

Have Sent for Arms.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 12.—The contractors who are constructing the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railroad have sent here and to St. Ignace for arms. The men on the east and south of middle divisions have armed for an advance on $1.00 per day. The total number of arms is about 500. The superintendent of construction and chief engineer Thursday night stated that the strike is very embarrassing. They have contracted to turn over the road complete by July 1. The leaders of the strike were immediately discharged, but refused to leave the scene, and feeling runs high.

Wisconsin Grand Lodge K. of P.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 12.—The grand lodge of Wisconsin, Knights of Pythias, has concluded its business and adjourned. The following are the new officers: Grand chancellor, B. W. Hunt; Milwaukee vice-chancellor, S. D. Hubbard; Montclair master of exchequer, Fred Kraus; Milwaukee; keeper of records and seals, H. J. Wood; Oshkosh; inner guard, Philip Valter; Milwaukee; outer guard, A. W. Goss; Janesville; secretary, George B. Shaw; Eau Claire.

Attain by the Train.

CHICAGO, March 12.—George Halsey, son of the late Dr. Clinton Halsey, of South Evanston, was struck by the Chicago & Evanston train Friday night and instantly killed. His little sister Ida was injured at the same time, but will recover. The young man was tragically mangled.

Law Against Larceny.

LANSING, Mich., March 12.—The Grand jury has become a law. It has indicted the keeper of a house of ill-fame, or procurer, shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for both from one to five years.

Refused Smith a Hearing.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., March 12.—The supreme court Friday overruled the petition of State Senator Smith for a rehearing in the Smith-Robertson litigation.

Two Western Settlers' Chosen Specific.

With every advance of emigration into the far west, a new demand is created for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Newly settled regions are frequently less healthy, because their older settled localities, on account of the miasmata which rises from recently cleared land, particularly along the banks of rivers that are subject to freshets. The agricultural or mining emigrant soon learns, when he does not already know, that the bitters afford the only sure protection against malaria, and those disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels, to which climate changes, exposure, and unaccustomed or unhealthy water or diet give rise. Consequently he places an estimate on this

SALE OF REAL ESTATE—CONVEY. COURT.
HALL COUNTY. In the matter of the estate of Peter Neyhart deceased.
 Notice is hereby given that by virtue and in pursuance of an order of license made in said matter on the second day of March, 1887, by the conveyance court of said county, the undersigned administrator will, on the second day of April next, at two o'clock in the afternoon, at the residence of a law office in the city of Janesville, will hold at public auction the following described real estate, viz: unnumbered lot west of lot 12, and north of lot 13, in the fourth range (12) of Rockport, in the said city of Janesville, Wisconsin, as recorded plat thereof.—Dated, March 30, 1887.
 H. A. STONE, administrator.

doc34mar1

STATE OF WISCONSIN—CIRCUIT COURT.
FOR ROCK COUNTY. In re probate.
 Notice is hereby given that at the April term of said court, to be held on the 1st day of said county, at the court house in Janesville,

[illegible][illegible] day of April, A. D. 1887, being April fifth and sixth, 1887, the following matter will be heard and considered:

The petition of James B. Dearborn for the administration of the estate of the said deceased, late of the city of Jacksonville, in said county—Dated March 1, 1887.

By the Court, J. W. SAFF,
County Judge

mar13w
STATE OF GEORGIA, CIRCUIT COURT
vs. ROBERT CLOWE, a H. Skelton, Plaintiff
vs. JOCK CLOWE, defendant.

And the undersigned do hereby certify that the
You are hereby summoned to appear within twenty days after service of the summons explained on the day of service, and if you the above entitled action in the court aforesaid and of the day of court, and if you fail to will be rendered against you according to the demand of the complaint.

Witness my hand and the seal of said court this 13th day of March, A. D. 1887.

JAMES B. DEARBORN, Plaintiff's Attorney,
P. O. Address, Jacksonville, Rock county, Wis
jane2dt

WANTED—Lads acting in every town $7.
highest salary of any other. For the sale of an article that is having the most phenome-

TO ADVERTISERS—Lowest rates for advertising in 1906 granted to companies sent free. Address: JEO. F. HOWELL & CO., 10 Spruce St. N. Y.

Subscribe for the Gazette.

One agent (mercantile only) wanted in every town. R. H. Tansill & Co., 55 State St. Chicago. E. B. Heim.

Street, druggist, agent for Janesville awards!

DOCTOR BATE!

283 S. CLARK ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Treats with great skill all

Private, Chronic, Wasting and

Nervous Diseases,
YOUNG OR MIDDLE-AGED MEN, or save one, who by acts of imprudence at any time of his life, become subject to the terrible effects of the transmission of Nature's Laws, through contact with. Borne in person or by letter without delay, no matter who that failed to care you, or how increased your casesend stamps for his guide to death; give the name of your nearest Express Office, and the name

J. W. BATE, M.D.

Hours: 9 to 5. Sundays, 10 to 12. Clark Street,
Chicago, ILL.

W. L. DOUGLAS
$3 SHOE.
 Stylish, Durable, Easy-Fitting.
 The $3 Shoe for Men & Women.
W. L. DOUGLAS
$2.50 SHOE
 Stylish, Durable, Easy-Fitting.
 The $2.50 Shoe for Men & Women.
 Made by other firms.
 Our $2
BEST-KID
FINEST CALF

HOE FOR BOYS gives great satisfaction. All shoe-makers make in Britain, Germany and France. U. S. (Your dealer does not keep them, send name to W. L. DOUGLAS, Brockton, Mass.)

Beware of Fraud. Know that some cheap imitations are sold at half price. When asked why we stamp it not on the bottom of our shoes and on the other side of the sole, we say: W. L. DOUGLAS. Take name represented to be the shoe maker. The name is guaranteed to be there are stamped on bottom of each shoe.

For sale by JAMES MADDEN.

MARBLE AND GRANITE MONUMENTS!

Cheaper than any traveling man can possibly afford. Don't be hampered by good talking agents.

Fine Granite Monuments
A specialty. Patent Iron Reservoir
Flower Vases for lawns and cemeteries. Come and see me.

F. A. BENNETT.
Greenville, Wiscons.

mark & deary

GOLD MEDAL, PARIS, 1875.

BAKER'S

Best Swiss Cocoa.

Warranted absolutely pure
Cocoa, from which the cause of Oil has been removed. It has three times the strength of Cocoa mixed with Starch, Arrowroot, or Sugar, and is therefore far more economical, costing less than one cent a cup. It is delicious, nourishing, strengthening, easily digested, and admirably adapted for invalids as well as for persons in health.

Sold by Grocers everywhere.

W. BAKER & CO., Dorchester, Mass.

